Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Based upon applicant's remarks submitted 3/10/2008, applicant's amendment to the claims does not clarify issues for appeal and are "stylistic" purposes. Therefore they are not entered.

Applicant goes on to argue the 102(e) rejection. Based upon applicant arguments directed to the display template for individualize data examiner had cited portion from column 13 and 14 of the prior art which discuss a watch list and select personalized stocks for a individual user. The prior art goes on to argue html templates and scripts to create a display for the user. It appears that applicant intends for a different interpretation of the claim language which is currently not supported by the current terminology used, current the scope the claims are broad and therefore the present prior art anticipates the presently claimed invention. Therefore applicant's arguments fail to distinguish over the prior art of record, thus the rejection is maintained. .
